EXCELLENCE AND SERVICE

The first graduates of the new School of Public Health walked across the stage to receive their diplomas in May. They each left this campus with new tools to improve the lives of individuals, communities, and entire populations. Each will share in accomplishing our over-arching mission at the Robert C. Byrd Health Sciences Center:

Transforming Lives and Eliminating Health Disparities.

They join with the thousands of alumni of our Schools of Dentistry, Medicine, Nursing, and Pharmacy as the most powerful evidence of our academic health center's impact on the character, abilities, and careers of people who come to us for education.

It is a profound honor to be a part of the Mountaineer tradition of excellence and service. In the pages of this report, you will learn about the accomplishments of our students, faculty, and staff in the past year, and the many generous donors who supported those efforts.

It is particularly gratifying to know that so many individuals have made gifts over the past year in support of WVU's ongoing effort, A State of Minds – the Campaign for West Virginia's University. We are honored by each gift made to the Health Sciences Center.

The friends listed here each donated $10,000 or more from July 1, 2012 to June 30, 2013. Their gifts comprised nearly 87% of all private dollars to the WVU Health Sciences Center during this time period.

RECOGNIZING MULTI-YEAR DONORS

As we reviewed the gifts and accomplishments of the year, we were awed to realize how many of our most generous donors have offered their support in prior years. Over 65% of our extraordinary friends this fiscal year (listed here) have given at a similar level both this year and in one or more years since the 2007 start of A State of Minds: The Campaign for West Virginia's University.

This medallion indicates feature stories on these special multi-year donors in the pages that follow.

A LONG HISTORY OF HELPING

Three siblings were already in college when George Curry SoM '43 headed to WVU in 1939. The athletic Eagle Scout from White Sulphur Springs found a room to rent; his share was $8 a month. George earned tuition and spending money by waiting tables at the WVU Men's Dorm and later the Alpha Phi sorority house. There he met Ethel DeBolt, a pretty, vivacious co-ed from Marion County. "Tizzie" played the piano after dinner and invited George to join her and the other Alpha Phis for nightly sing-alongs.

The two were married in June, 1944, a month after Mrs. Curry graduated from WVU. Because Ensign Curry had to report to the US Navy at 8 am the next day, the couple honeymooned on a day coach to Cincinnati. He trained in Internal Medicine at the Medical College of Virginia and the VA Hospital in Richmond. Tizzie taught school that year, earning $116 a month; George got free room and board at the hospital.

Today, Dr. and Mrs. Curry remain in Morgantown, along with two of their four children, but winter in Florida so George, 93, can play golf year-round. Son Dr. George A. Curry II, a 1972 WVU medicine grad, lives in Oklahoma City. "I decided in 10th grade to become a doctor," said the elder Dr. Curry. In 1935, a new antibacterial drug saved his oldest brother's life. "I thought medicine was a good career choice."

The George and Ethel Curry Medical Scholarship was created as a way to give back. "I've had lots of health problems. I got along so well each time I admired what the medical profession has done for me," he said.

Thanks to the couples' ongoing philanthropy, numerous medical students have benefited. Today's Curry Scholars are medical students Claire Dolan and Brian Dilcher. Claire, a third year medical student, is considering Med-Peds as a specialty. In his second year, Brian says he is drawn to a career in Emergency Medicine or Oncology.

"I wanted our scholarship to be in George's honor, too, for all the good he has done for others," said Tizzie, his wife of 70 years.

DR. LORING ROSS

INVESTED IN WEST VIRGINIA

Loring Ross's dad had a plan for him. His father, an accountant, valued the independence and freedom that dentists in private practice seemed to possess. "As long as I can remember, he would cut out articles about dentists and leave them on my bed." So when Loring was drawn to the sciences, he turned to his father as mentor and guidance counselor. Dentistry was nearly a foregone conclusion, and there was little doubt what school Loring would attend —WVU.

The Ross family moved to West Virginia when Loring was nearly two, and in Parkersburg, they found their American dream. "You couldn't get into much trouble. It was a great place to raise a family," Loring explains. Following his love of teaching, Loring's father left Dupont and became Dean of Business Services at Parkersburg Community College (now WVUP). Loring spent two years at community college, then it was a smooth transition to WVU. "We were already so invested in West Virginia. I didn't apply to any other schools, and fortunately I was accepted to the School of Dentistry after just a year at WVU." Dr. Ross received his Bachelor of Arts in 1975, his DDS in 1978, and his Master of Science in Orthodontics in 1980, all from WVU.

Dr. Ross and his wife, Young, made a recent $100,000 gift to help fund the construction of a new building for WVU School of Dentistry. "Our fortunate way of life today comes out of those four years in dental school. Someone made it possible for me to go to school. We have to make it possible for the next generation. That's stewardship."

Ross is a member of the WVU Alumni Association and the School of Dentistry Campaign Committee, as well as the Woodburn Circle and Irvin Stewart Societies.

A RISING TIDE

For alumnus Vince Anido, PhD, '75, '78, giving isn't just about providing monetary support. It is about making a significant impact on the lives of student pharmacists.

Dr. Anido, together with his wife Patty Chambers Anido, established the Anido Family Pharmacy Scholarship in the amount of $50,000. The scholarship provides assistance to deserving students currently enrolled in the WVU School of Pharmacy.

"I wanted my gift to make an impact and be meaningful to students," Anido said. "My children, who are in their late 20's and early 30's, would tell me about their classmates who were struggling with debt during school and after graduation. My wife, Patty and I were fortunate that we were able to make sure our children didn't have those types of worries when they graduated and were starting their lives, so we want to do the same for student pharmacists."

"Vince has been extremely supportive of the School throughout my tenure as dean," said Patricia Chase, PhD, the Gates Wigner Dean of the WVU School of Pharmacy. "The cost of an education and student debt continues to rise, so scholarships like the Anido Family Pharmacy Scholarship play an even greater role in their ability to pursue their career goals. The impact this scholarship will have on a future pharmacist's life is immeasurable."

SCHOLARSHIP RECIPIENT
CHELSEA DUNAWAY

WILLIAM MURRAY

MURRAY SCHOLARSHIP

Established to honor the memory of William M. Murray and his devotion to public service and public health, the fund provides scholarship support to public health students like Chelsea Dunaway.

Chelsea is a second year MPH student who aspires to work in health policy. She is especially interested in mental health and in expanding access to health services in the Appalachian region. Though she had not heard of Bill Murray before she received she scholarship, she was quick to research him. "I'm honored to have been selected for this scholarship," Chelsea said. "The financial assistance from these generous donors has helped me pay for books and offsets my tuition expenses."

With Murray's administrative guidance and leadership, graduate public health education at West Virginia University was born and grew rapidly. The MPH program has achieved national certification, and attracted a growing stream of national and international applicants. Although the programs are only about a decade old, program graduates are successfully placed around the nation, and they are achieving leadership positions in state and federal agencies, in foundations and businesses, and in education. The William M. Murray Scholarship, established by retired WVU surgery chair, Gordon Murray, MD and his family in Bill's memory, was recently endowed and has been supported by 82 donors since its inception in 2007.

A LOYAL MOUNTAINEER

Betty Skaggs, PhD, '66, recently made a $25,000 gift to the School of Nursing to create the Skaggs Family Dean's Special Projects Fund to support school activities. In today's economy with limited resources from state funds, this unrestricted gift is especially important to the school. This flexible funding can be used to recruit excellent faculty, fund student initiatives, and equip and renovate classrooms.

After receiving her BSN from WVU, Skaggs began her nursing career at WVU Hospitals as a pediatric nurse. She later worked at Baylor University Medical Center and the University of Florida Health Sciences Center. While in Florida she earned her master's degree in nursing. Finally, as Director of the University of Texas School of Nursing Learning Center she administered a clinical simulation lab, a computer lab, an audio visual library, and learning enhancement service. During her career, Skaggs earned her PhD in curriculum and instruction from the UT Austin College of Education.

Because she values civic engagement as well as education, Skaggs has served on numerous boards and participated in many community organizations in Austin where she currently resides. Skaggs is also a life member of the WVU School of Nursing Alumni Association.

PIGMENT OF PROMISE

Spend 20 minutes with Rajesh Naz, PhD, and your mind will be humming with possibilities.

His lab looks like every other lab—off white walls, microscopes, pipettes, and of course, a few assistants. But his research promises to improve our understanding of fertility, and provide new avenues for safer, more effective forms of contraception.

Dr. Naz has published over 200 peer reviewed articles related to human reproduction. “Over 10% of infertility is caused by antibodies produced in either partner in an infertile couple,” he explains while gesturing to a poster. Naz’s research seeks to harness this dysfunctional response. So far, he has identified more than 10 genes which might trigger immune reaction. These genes are being used to develop targeted contraceptive vaccines, which could have numerous benefits. Immunocontraception eliminates the health complications and environmental challenges attendant with hormonal birthcontrol. It can be used by men or women. In mammal models, contraceptive vaccines often require only a semiannual booster shot.

Naz, who acquired his PhD at the All India Institute of Medical Sciences in New Delhi, India, is also excited about the potential uses of curcumin (diferuloyl methane)—the yellow pigment in turmeric, a traditional Indian spice. While other scientists have found that curcumin has antibacterial, antiviral, anti-inflammatory, and anticancer properties, Naz is testing curcumin as a contraception. In mouse models, the antifertility effect was reversible.

Naz has been a professor at WVU since 2005 and has trained over 60 students, residents, and post-doctoral fellows, and over 130 undergraduate student workers. He has authored/edited 8 books and serves on the editorial boards of nine journals.

Exemplary research such as Dr. Naz’s is being conducted in every clinical department at the School of Medicine. Private gifts for research today are more important than ever.

TO WHOM MUCH IS GIVEN

Emerson Farley, MD wants results. And fortunately for West Virginia, the Eastern Division of WVU School of Medicine delivers.

For the past 9 years, Dr. Farley and his wife, Mary, have supported the Eastern Division of the School of Medicine through the Emerson D. Farley Jr., MD and Mary Snider Farley Rural Medicine Support Fund. Fund proceeds are used to encourage primary care providers to locate in medically underserved areas of West Virginia.

And for each of those years, the Farleys have been notified of the identity of one to three award recipients as well as their planned practice locations.

Farley likes that. "This lends accountability that the money is being spent the way I want!"

The Farleys grew up in Fairmont, WV. "Back then, no one had any more than anyone else. No one knew if they were poor," he explains. But after he graduated and left West Virginia, the disparities became apparent. Primary care is a much needed skill in rural areas of West Virginia.

"To whom much is given, much will be required," Farley quotes. "We wanted to help our home state, West Virginia, so in 2004, we formed the Rural Medicine Support Fund and supplement it annually. We have been blessed by giving."

HELPING SHAPE THE LIVES OF STUDENTS

His degree from the WVU School of Pharmacy was the base of a successful career for Irvin VanMeter, Jr., '53.

Mr. VanMeter, a native of Huntington, West Virginia, began his career in community pharmacy. After 17 years in community practice, he worked for the next 25 years at the Charleston Area Medical Center (CAMC). In 2000, he began a new job as an inspector for the West Virginia Board of Pharmacy, where he continues to work today.

With a career in which he practiced in both community and institutional settings, VanMeter knows the value and importance of future pharmacists obtaining a high level of education and professional development in order to become leaders in the profession of pharmacy.

“Having my pharmacy degree created a life that was good to me, for my family, and it opened a lot of doors for me,” VanMeter said. “I wanted to be able to give back to the University in some way and help students.”

It was with this sentiment in mind that VanMeter decided to create The Irvin and Benita VanMeter Pharmacy Scholarship. The scholarship is awarded to an outstanding student who is a resident of West Virginia, demonstrates financial need, and is in good academic standing.

Current P-4 Adam Ferguson and current P-3 Derek Wetsch were the first recipients of the scholarship.

“I think it is great that alumni are creating scholarships,” Ferguson said. “Not only does it help current students, but it also shows how much they care about the profession and are willing to help shape the future.”

Ferguson will graduate in May 2014, and he plans to complete a residency and pursue a career in clinical practice. Receiving one of the Irvin and Benita VanMeter Pharmacy Scholarships lightens his financial burdens, and he is able to concentrate fully on his final year of study and academic success.

“The scholarship has eased my financial worries,” Ferguson said. “It has allowed me to not worry about finances and focus on my rotations. I feel honored and privileged to be a recipient of the scholarship.”

Wetsch will graduate in May 2015. Like Ferguson, he is also appreciative to have been chosen as a scholarship recipient.

“To receive any scholarship is an honor because someone else has invested in your future,” Wetsch said. “This help not only comes in financial means, but it also serves to motivate a recipient to let them know you are a worthy investment.”

Receiving the Irvin and Benita VanMeter Scholarship gave Wetsch a new realization about the full benefits of alumni scholarships.

“I am reminded that alumni were once students, too,” he said. “They remember how it felt to be a student and are excited to help out the future of their profession. When alumni create scholarships, it sets the bar for the future of the profession, and it lets current students know that they will have the same opportunity to support other future students.”

MAGNETIC BABIES

Kohl's Cares has donated more than $990,000 to the Kohl's Healthy Babies program at WVU Children's Hospital since 2000, including a donation of more than $117,000 in 2013. Also this year, the program received national recognition for its unique and innovative efforts.

During the American Nurses Credentialing Center (ANCC) National Magnet Conference, WVU Healthcare Vice President and Chief Nursing Officer

Dottie Oakes, RN, MSN, accepted a 2013 Magnet Honors Award for the Healthy Babies program.

"This award recognizes cutting-edge research, practices, services, technologies, programs, or other exemplary innovations with demonstrated positive outcomes at credentialed Magnet organizations," Oakes said. "It gave me and the WVU Healthcare team great pride to accept this award in front of 7,500 of our colleagues."

The Kohl's Healthy Babies program at WVU Children's Hospital provides year-round community education and outreach focused on infant illness and injury prevention. For more information, please visit healthybabieswv.com.

WVU Hospitals is the only Magnet hospital in West Virginia, according to the ANCC.

QUALITY OF LIFE

WVU nursing alumna Patricia Chambers Anido, MSN recently created the Anido Family Nursing Scholarship to support undergraduates in order to make a difference in the quality of life for nursing students. Patty graduated with a bachelor of science in nursing from WVU '76 and went on to receive her master's degree in nursing at the University of Kansas in 1981. She taught medical surgical nursing at Avila College in Kansas City, MO in the BSN program and also worked in the medical and surgical intensive care units at St. Joseph's Hospital there.

"Even though we no longer live in West Virginia, my husband Vince and I love the state and still feel a very close connection to the University. With this scholarship we hope to make a difference in the lives of nursing students by helping to relieve some of the stress that comes with paying college tuition," said Patty. She wants her scholars to graduate without the tremendous debt burden that so many take with them as they begin their nursing careers. The first Anido Family Nursing Scholarship was awarded for the fall and spring semesters of the 2013-14 school year.

AMERICAN HOMETOWN

A West Virginia University alumnus and his wife, both natives of Hong Kong, have donated $300,000 to advance the work and mission of the West Virginia University School of Medicine.

Albert W. Young, MD, MPH, an intensivist/pulmonologist, and Kathy Young have established an endowment to provide scholarships for one or more deserving students at the WVU School of Medicine who demonstrate financial need and exceptional academic promise.

A graduate of Wah Yan College Kowloon, an Irish, Jesuit-run high school in Hong Kong, Dr. Young applied for admission to a number of American universities, “Fortunately for us,” said Arthur J. Ross III, MD, MBA, Dean of the School of Medicine, “West Virginia University was the first to respond.”

A gifted student at the undergraduate level, Albert applied to the School of Medicine after only three years at WVU and was accepted, graduating in '71. He completed his residency and fellowship training at the University of Southern California and later earned a Masters degree in Public Health from UCLA. He and his wife Kathy have two children, Renee and Eric.

DR. ALBERT YOUNG AND HIS WIFE KATHY YOUNG

In the decades since, Dr. Young has carved out a remarkable career in medicine and business. He currently serves as the Chief Medical Officer for Allied Physicians IPA in Alhambra, CA, which coordinates quality patient care among physicians who contract with health plans and hospitals to provide comprehensive care to Health Maintenance Organization (HMO) members.

In addition to his philanthropic support, Dr. Young serves as chair of the WVU School of Medicine's A State of Minds Campaign Committee and is a member of the School's Visiting Committee, where he works alongside others to advance the School's mission to improve the lives of the people of West Virginia and beyond. “Morgantown, West Virginia, is my hometown in America,” he said.

A PERFECT FIT

R. Edward Hamrick, Jr. MD is a third generation and the fifth West Virginia physician in his family. They have practiced medicine for over 100 years in West Virginia. He and his family proudly support the WVU School of Medicine.

Dr. Hamrick graduated from the WVU School of Medicine in 1979. After completing his surgical residency at LSU in New Orleans, he returned home to Charleston in 1983. Since then, he has been a clinical faculty member of the WVU Department of Surgery in Charleston.

On four occasions he has received the award for the greatest contribution to resident education in the department.

“Supporting the James P. Boland, MD, Department of Surgery Endowment Research Fund has been an excellent way for the Hamrick family to express our thanks and gratitude to Dr. Boland and the WVU School of Medicine,” Hamrick explains. The Boland endowment offers surgical research support to a deserving faculty member and fosters the education of future surgical residents and medical students.

“It's a perfect fit!” Hamrick said.

BILL ATKINSON

OPHTHALMIC SURGICAL SIMULATOR

ERNA AND BILL

GIFT OF A LIFETIME

A calming painting of country roads by the late Erna Trautman Atkinson brightens the second floor patient lobby of the WVU Eye Institute. She and husband Bill began their long philanthropic relationship with the Eye Institute in 1996.

“We wanted to give back. We were both grateful to the Eye Institute for the excellent care we had there,” Atkinson said.

He credits his wife for their history of creative giving, which included a collection of coins, a charitable remainder trust, the proceeds from an IRA rollover, and several outright gifts of cash. After Erna’s death in 2011, he has continued to give, both in her memory and in gratitude to Judie Charlton, MD, who treated his glaucoma.

The Atkinson gifts have supported the purchase of an ophthalmic surgical simulator, a RetCam used in the Neonatal Intensive Care Unit to diagnose and treat retinopathy of prematurity, equipment that aids in the diagnosis and treatment in the adult and pediatric eye clinics, and an endowment fund to support research, diagnosis, and treatment of childhood eye problems.

“We are very appreciative of the support Bill and Erna have provided over the past years,” said Ron Gross, MD, director of the Eye Institute. “Their gifts have allowed us to stay on the cutting edge of ophthalmic technology, which translates into exceptional patient care.”

A PERPETUAL INVESTMENT

“Our family feels fortunate to have been exposed early on to the WVU Charleston Division Medical School cultivated by long-standing ties with Dr. Bert Bradford. Bert was a charismatic promoter of the program. His vision for it is carried forward by Dr. Al Pfister and Dr. Greg Rosencrance, both of whom have cared for our family and many other families in the Kanawha Valley. We view the endowment honoring our parents, John and Antoinette Thomas, as a perpetual investment to improve healthcare in West Virginia,” Chris Thomas said.

WITH ANTONY FABIANO, WVU CHILDREN'S PATIENT

LONGEST PARTNERSHIP

The longest-standing partnership WVU Children's Hospital has is with Children's Miracle Network Hospitals (CMNH).

Today, more than 40 businesses, groups and organizations raise money in their local communities for Children's Hospital. In 2012 alone, these sponsors combined raised nearly $2.1 million through events like DQ Miracle Treat Day, IHOP National Pancake Day and radiothons and by selling Children's Miracle Network Hospitals icons in the check-out lines at stores like Walmart, Sam's Club and Rite Aid.

“We are extremely grateful for the ever-growing network of supporters that help us care for our patients,” Cheryl Jones, RN, director of WVU Children's Hospital, said. “Whether it's the donation of money, time, toys, blankets or anything else, we couldn't do what we do without the generosity of many. We simply cannot thank everyone enough for all of their support.”

OPPORTUNITY FOR SIGHT

In 2006, now retired administrative law judge, Mae Catherine "Kitty" Reeves of Westernport, MD, was taken to the emergency room when she suddenly developed double vision while driving. Reeves visited a string of doctors, but none had an explanation for the condition. Her vision continued to deteriorate. Eventually, she was referred to the WVU Eye Institute and Judie Charlton, MD. After two surgeries, Reeves' vision and life returned to normal.

"From my initial appointment with Dr. Charlton, I have been impressed with the professionalism and humanity of the healthcare personnel at the Eye Institute. They truly serve the people of West Virginia and beyond," Reeves said. In spring of 2013, she endowed the "Opportunity Fund" at the Eye Institute.

"Kitty beautifully demonstrates the generosity and caring of so many who strongly support the WVU Eye Institute in its mission," said Ronald L. Gross, MD, director of the WVU Eye Institute and chair of the Department of Ophthalmology at the WVU School of Medicine. "Her Opportunity Fund will allow us to continue to make great progress in research, education, and outreach for the people of West Virginia and our neighboring states. There is real opportunity to make a real difference in the lives of West Virginians and beyond by finding better ways to discover and treat diseases that all too often result in vision loss. We have a need to do better and with Kitty's help, we can do just that."

DR. JIM STEVENSON

GIFT HONORS JIM STEVENSON

An anonymous donor pledged $1.5 million to endow the James M. Stevenson, MD, Chair in Behavioral Medicine and Psychiatry through a bequest. This endowment will advance teaching, research and service by providing a broad range of support including supplemental compensation, travel, technology enhancements, hospitality, and faculty and student support.

Thank you!

CARLA PLUM DEMONSTRATES 3D ULTRASOUND

HONORING BETTY

A record crowd joined breast cancer survivor models for a night of high fashion and special tribute to Betty Puskar at the 15th Betty Puskar Breast Cancer Fashion Show at Lakeview Resort and Spa in Morgantown. The event netted about $100,000 for the Breast Care Center that bears her name.

Betty's daughter Johanna Puskar and grandson Kyle Pratt were the main sponsors and their support went toward the purchase of the new automated, 3D breast ultrasound system at the Breast Care Center. This state-of-the-art technology captures multiple ultrasound images and displays them in 3D for review by a radiologist. It is used for cancer detection in patients with dense breast tissue.

Morgantown business owner Liz Raese made a significant donation for the renovation of a suite at the Breast Care Center to house the new equipment. The suite will be named in honor of Robin Troy, who was diagnosed with breast cancer at age 52 and who lost her battle against the disease in February 2011.

The Friends of University Hospitals also presented Betty with a $10,000 check for the Breast Care Center.

*Thank you!
Johanna Puskar, Kyle Pratt, Liz Raese and

ALISON CONROY

BETTY PUSKAR

A NEW HOME FOR THE HOUSE

A haze of colorful cornstarch descended upon Mylan Park, covering over 8,400 Color Me Rad (CMR) participants in a rainbow of happiness in September. CMR, based in Utah, is a non-timed 5k walk/run designed to get people moving in a non-competitive, family friendly, purely fun environment. September saw their first visit to West Virginia—and a race bigger than anyone expected.

Starting in April of this year, Rosenbaum Family House Board member Vicki Antion Nelson and her co-worker, Elisha Dew, both of Motley Rice, LLC, worked tirelessly to bring CMR to Morgantown, and to make the event a success. They, along with the Family House's Teri Batis, secured both financial and in-kind donations from the community, and brought in vendors and activities to make race day a festival-type event.

When they first started working on bringing the race to Morgantown, the CMR organizers told the Family House committee to expect between 3,000 and 4,000 racers. When registration opened in June, over 2,000 people signed up in the first two weeks, and the Morgantown race surpassed registration expectations months before the race. Race Director Trevor White said that Morgantown was “the fastest sign-up we’ve ever seen.”

Proceeds to the Family House came from sponsor donations, vendor fees, and from a percentage of registration fees that came from users signing up with a Family House code, for which they received a discount. All told, the Family House raised over $46,000.
